PENCHANT FOR PRETTY ACTRESSES

Too Much Money Was His Ruin-A $35,000 Bathroom in Paris-Ilis Mother's Will Prevented Him from Marrying an Actress-Eloped whon a Young Man and His Father Paid $12,000 for His Release.

Howell Osborn, a man who had nothing to do but to spend money, lived a long time and died last week at the age of thirty-six. He was the type of a class new in the history of this country.

There came after the war conditions which made possible the rapid accumulation of great wealth. Jay Gould was of the first generation under the new order of things, and Howell Osborn, whose fortune came directly through his father's association with Jay Gould, was of the second generation-a charactor illustrating the reactionary tendency to dissipate quickly the millions made suddenly, to squaader without thought the riches made without teil. He was a genius of unmaking.

A HUNDRED THOUSAND INCOME.

Howell was the only son of Charles J. Osborn, a famous Wall street broker, a oon vivant, a man of refined tastes. The son vivant, a man or refined tastes. The father died in 1885, leaving his widow $2,000,000, and to Howell the sum of $500,000 in trust, only the income of which was available. His mother, Miriam A. Osborn, died in 1891, leaving $700,000 in trust, only the income of this being available. He received in addition the income of one-half of the residue of the estate. This 147 Osborn. residue of the estate. This left Osborn in receipt of about $100,000 a year, with no responsibilities, with no binding obligation to anybody for anything, and with only the care of getting rid of $25,000 coartes! 5,000 quarterly. His mother's will put the principal of

His mother's will put the principal of the estate, from which his pin money of $275 a day was derived, beyond his control. His power to bequeath it was contingent upon having his heirs by a wifo who had never acted, sung or danced professionally, or otherwise per-formed for hire on a dramatic stage, or other place of amysayment or restation. other place of amusement or entertain

At that time Osborn had already be-At that time Osborn had already be-came noted as an admirer of actresses. He had for ten years been what might be termed a nublic character in the role of spendthrift, known in Paris and Monte Carlo almost as well as in New York. London was rather too slow for him.

ELOPED WITH AN ACTRESS.

His first serious entanglement occurred when he was twenty-one years of age. He became infatuated with Alice Eurville, an English actress, who came to New York in the comic opera, "Billee Taylor." He eloped with her, "Billee Taylor." He eloped with her, after his attentions had become so pro after his attentions had become so pronounced as to call for family protest. He is said to have married the woman. The elder Osborn paid her $12,000, according to the club gossip of the day, to relinquish her claims. Whatever the figure may have been, the offer was satisfactory to the Burville, and young Osborn was free—for another entanglement. The first escapade had established his place in the fast set and fairly launched him upon a career of profligate adventure. The cabmen and the waiters attached to his favorite resorts tell fabulous stories of his opensorts tell fabulous stories of his opensorts tell randous stories of his open-handedness.

The young man dressed well and be-came a fashion. He set the pace for a crowd of wealthy young men about town. He foll in and out of love with all sorts of actresses, prima donnas, chorus girls and ballet dancers. At one time he was reported to have married Lillian Russell. That report was inac-

Before his father's death young Os-Before his father's death young Osborn had had an experience, a disastrons one, on Wall street. He had gone into partnership with William Stow and became a member of the stock exchange. The firm was soon dissolved, and Stow sued to recover $50,000 which he had loaned Osborn. He got $10,000 by selling his partner's seat in the exchange. Stow got a judgment for the other $50,000 but it was returned from the short. 500, but it was returned from the sher-ift's office unsatisfied. A referee was appointed and testimony taken, but the long and short of it is that Stow never got his $30,000.

Then comes Fay Templeton.

Then comes Fay Templeton into the story. She was very pretty when Osbora first met her. They were talked about for months before he established her comfortably in an apartment how on Sixth avanue. her comfortably in an apartment house on Sixth avenue, at Fifty-second street. There was some famous convivial gath-erings there. Fay Templeton was talked erings there. Fay Temploton was talked about to her heart's content. Osborn had money for everything but dobts. He even paid a few of them. There was no whim of his own or his inamorata's too extravagant for findulgence. Once when she was playing with Rice and Dixey's Corsair Company, in Chicago, Miss Temploton created a sensation by disappearing suddenly. It came out in time that she had come straight on to New York and had gone straight on to Paris in response to a cablegram from Osborn to meet him in Havre.

HIGH JINKS IN PARIS.

Osborn had to spend considerable time in Paris on account of the importunities of his creditors in this country. He lived there in high style. He entertained lavishly, his equipages were of the linest, and it is said that the bath-room in his Paris house cost $35,000. It was said at the time of Miss Templeton's departure that Osborn had undertaken to provide for her while she was cultivating her voice in Paris. A couple of years after that Fay Templeton came back to America alone and got an engagement at the Fourteenth street theatre in "Hendrik Hudson." It was then that the Osborn-Templeton diamond custom house episode occurred. Diamonds worth $20,000 were seized by customs officers from Osborn's valet on his arrival in this city.

Miss Templeton made a great-to-do and asseverated upon her professional honor that the gems were her personal property. She said she and Howell had "gone clean broke" in Paris, and that she had pawned her jowels to keep the ton's departure that Osborn had under-she had pawned her jewels to keep the wolf from the door. She got the dis-monds.

Notwithstanding the apparent financial embarrassment Osborn was making things fly in Paris. He had a big house on the Boulevard Haussmann, and was kown as a plunger at baccarat and the race tracks. He finally made a big hit in gambling, and got so much money together that he was able to square things a little and come back to this country. It was reported that he made some money in stocks while here, but his creditors began to bother him again his creditors began to bother him again and he returned to Paris, where Miss Templeton also found it pleasant to

NINA PARRINGTON PAYORED. Osborn's attentions to other actresses resulted in frequent quarrels and some stormy scenes, Miss Templeton regarding these others. Nina Farrington and Lillian Russell among them, as poachers upon her preserves. The Farring-ton opisode involved a wealthy piano dealer whom Osborn found at Miss dealer whom Osborn found at Miss Farrington's apartments, No. 05 West Twenty-fifth street. There was a tremendous row about that. Osborn sulked away to Europe. Nina followed him a week later. The last sorious quarrel between Osborn and Miss Templeton, so far as the public was informed, was in 1893 at Chicago. They were visiting the World's Fair. So was Lillian Russell, who became very friendly with Osborn. Miss Templeton left Osborn and it was six menths before they made up again. Osborn pacificed the executors of the estate with the assurance that there had been with the assurance that there had been

Superintendent Byrnes, who is also indebted to the Goulds for financial assistance, was a useful friend to Osborn, it has always been understood. Another friend was Addison Cammack, once a partner of Charles J. Osborn, who is said to have put Howell in the way of picking up $60,000 in Wall street

Osborn has been an invalid, or almost an invalid, for about three years. In 1892 he met in Australia the nephew of an English nobleman, whom he made his private secretary. The task of anunsing himself had become burdensome to Osborn. He had shown a remarkable ingenuity in devising means of spending money, but at last the squandering of $100,000 a year had become todious and routine effort. To think of something new in extravagance was the principal duty of the secretary. Osborn became a listless and inort figure in the drift of his own affairs. He was sick. He came near dying of blood poisoning from the scratch of an oyster shell. That was in Paris. He Osborn has been an invalid, or almost blood poisoning from the scratch of an oyster shell. That was in Paris. He was in bod six weeks.

Even if Osborn's creditors get any satisfaction out of his personal property to the exclusion of his particular friend, Miss Templeton will probably not be reduced to beggary for several years at least. Osborn has given her $50,000 worth of jewols, and some other property. She is expected to claim his pictures and works of art, carriages, horses and property in the Paris house.

The After-Effects of the Grip Seem to be Worse Than the Disease Itself. There are more weak, tired and run down per ple to-day than have been seen before in five years, and owing to one special cause; that cause is the grip. Grip is not as severe this year cause is the grip. Orly is not as severe this year as in the past, but it is very provalent and quite as annoying. It leaves the person weak, subject to child, with occasionally flashes of high fever, reatleasues, lack of appetite, but laste in the mouth and pains throughout the body. The worst thing about grip is getting over it, and even after it is broken, it is weeks, sometime nonths, and even years, before the person fully tecovers.

Here is where the great danger, the great dread which attends the grip arises. It leaves the body weak, often broken, and open to all the attacks which may come in after years. It often
